About This Game

powerful that you can manage vast armies across an entire world that provide you with an ever greater galactic empire.

Now, humanity is under assault by a new enemy. Calling themselves the Substrate, they seek to annihilate the human race from existence. You, as an up and coming member of the Post-Human Coalition, must deal with both this new menace as well as renegade humans trying to lay claim to their own worlds.

Play as the Post Human Coalition or their eternal foes the Substrate and battle for control of the galaxy. Experience maps of unprecedented size and detail with the unparalleled power of the world's first native 64-bit RTS engine, Nitrous.

Enjoy the game online with friends in ranked or unranked multiplayer mode or play it by yourself against a powerful non-cheating AI in skirmish or campaign mode. No matter what mode you play, strategy is the key: deciding what technologies to research, where to send your armies, how to manage your economy, and what units to construct are crucial to victory.

Experience a massive-scale real time strategy game where you wage war across worlds with thousands of units. The conflict has escalated, and it's time to choose a side.

Best benchmark software on steam. Game is great, Lots of fun, I enjoy the scale of the game and really makes me feel like this is an "alternative" version of Supreme Commander. The graphics are impressive and the variety of units and counter play is on point. Game is also not even a full price game and you're getting plenty of content via campaign and multiplayer.

However I find that some of the bugs can get in the way of the gameplay at times and the crashing the game does when lots of units are involved.

Overall the game is very polished and performs as intended about 90% of the time. I give it 8/10, great audio, great graphics, great gameplay but suffers from strange bugs\desyncs, crashes at times and units not following orders at times.
